ABOUT SIEBA

What is SIEBA?

The Schools International Education Business Association (SIEBA) is a registered charity established as an incorporated society in early 2015. SIEBA has been formed as a peak body in response to an industry call for leadership, increased business capability, greater collaboration and stronger representation for New Zealand schools in the international education sector.

SIEBA currently has over 380 member schools from state, state-integrated and private primary, intermediate and secondary schools.

Member Benefits and Services

SIEBA is committed to providing services, products and member benefits that will lead, connect and grow New Zealand schools and the sector as whole. Some of these services include:

- Professional development and training
- Good practice and advisory services
- Resources and templates
- Collaboration, networking and sharing
- Capability and quality building
- Marketing and support

Benefits for Agents

Some of the benefits for agents in working with SIEBA include:

- Access to the SIEBA Schools Directory of over 380 member schools
- Access to the Primary and Intermediate Schools Programme (PSP) to place students aged 5 – 13 years at over 60 primary and intermediate schools across New Zealand
- Access to the Placement Service, an agent-led listing service connecting agents with schools
- Improved administration efficiencies through streamlined processes and documentation
- A central contact point for the New Zealand school sector

SIEBA Collaboration

SIEBA works closely with a range of organisations to support the school sector including:

- Education New Zealand, Immigration New Zealand, Ministry of Education and NZQA
- Regional development groups
- Other New Zealand associations and peak bodies
- International organizations promoting international education

SIEBA works very closely with Education New Zealand in the following areas:

- Identifying opportunities for larger scale commercial opportunities
- Assisting the development of a school sector international strategy
- Support for school sector product development
- Supporting programmes for regional growth
- Research and data collection to support pricing and product development
- Exploring alternative business models for New Zealand schools

EDUCATION IN NEW ZEALAND

The education system in New Zealand comprises:

- early childhood education - from birth to school entry age
- primary and intermediate schools – from 5 to 13 years of age
- secondary schools - from 13 to 19 years of age
- further education - higher and vocational education.

The education system in New Zealand reflects our unique and diverse society. We welcome different abilities, religious beliefs, ethnic groups and ideas about teaching and learning. We have processes in place to give students consistent, high-quality education at all levels.

Schooling is compulsory in New Zealand from ages 6 to 16 however students can choose to start school on the day they turn 5 years old. Most students in New Zealand stay at school until they are 17 or 18 years of age.

State, State-Integrated and Private schools

Most schools in New Zealand are owned and funded by the state and teach the national curriculum.

State schools are secular meaning they have no religious affiliations.

State-integrated schools are schools that were private and have become part of the state education system. They are funded by the government and teach the national curriculum. State-integrated schools have special character and promote their own religion and beliefs in addition to the state education system.

Private schools are mostly funded through school fees. They develop their own learning programmes and do not have to follow the national curriculum.

National Curriculum

The national curriculum covers subjects that are taught at primary, intermediate and secondary schools and sets out the standards students should reach in each subject.

Primary/intermediate education focuses on foundation learning across a range of subjects and competencies but especially in literacy and numeracy. At secondary school, students learn a broad and balanced curriculum with increased specialisation in higher year levels. English is the language of instruction with various courses and support available for English second language learners.

www.nzcurriculum.tki.org.nz/The-New-Zealand-Curriculum

National Certificate of Educational Achievement (NCEA)

The National Certificate of Educational Achievement (NCEA) is the national senior secondary school qualification. NCEA is assessed during the last three years at school (Years 11 to 13). Students can achieve NCEA at all 3 levels in a wide range of courses and subjects.

NCEA challenges students of all abilities in all learning areas and shows credits and grades for separate skills and knowledge. It enables students to gain credits from both traditional school curriculum areas and alternative programmes.

Enrolling in the Primary and Intermediate Schools Programme (PSP) is an excellent opportunity to begin an educational pathway to graduate from a New Zealand high school with a National Certificate of Educational Achievement which is widely accepted around the world as a quality university entrance qualification.

LIVING IN NEW ZEALAND

A multi-cultural society

New Zealanders, also known as Kiwis, are a friendly, outgoing and welcoming people. 14.6% of the 4.4 million population are Maori, New Zealand's native people. The other 85.4% are a mixture of Europeans, Asians and Pacific Islanders. This unusual blend of cultures is one reason why New Zealand is so unique.

There are three official languages in New Zealand; Maori, English and New Zealand Sign Language with English being the main everyday language.

Becoming one of the locals

The best way to feel at home in New Zealand is to become one of the locals. Getting to know the Kiwi's around you will be one of the things you will love most about your time in our country. New Zealanders are very kind-hearted, they like to joke and smile, and welcome opportunities to meet new people. Try to relax and be willing to learn our culture and don't worry about making mistakes with your English as New Zealanders will appreciate you making the effort.

NORTH ISLAND

NORTHLAND

The region of Northland and the Bay of Islands stretches north from Auckland, towards the warm waters of Polynesia.

The relaxed, sunny lifestyle of Northland springs from its subtropical climate and the many beautiful islands, bays and beaches around the coastline.

The people of the North have a passion for water sports including surfing, boating, game fishing, sailing, and diving. They also have a deep appreciation of the region's fascinating Maori and European history.

TARANAKI

Taranaki, on the North Island's west coast, juts into the Tasman Sea and is half way between Auckland and Wellington.

Mt Taranaki, a huge dramatic mountain with a snowy top is ever-present in this region. The mount is a spiritual and physical force and a source of over 50 rivers and streams. Mt Taranaki is the home of many botanically unique plants and the subject of many stories and legends. On sighting the mountain in 1642, explorer Abel Tasman said it was "the noblest hill I've ever seen".

The Taranaki region is a vibrant coastal area with excellent schooling and recreational options for international students.

HAWKES BAY

The Hawke's Bay region encompasses the area around Hawke's Bay on the east coast of the North Island. It is 332 kilometres (about four hours) north-east of Wellington City.

Blessed with a sunny, Mediterranean-style climate, Hawke's Bay is one of New Zealand's warmest, driest regions.

The landscapes of Hawke's Bay begin with the high, forested Ruahine and Kaweka Ranges. From the mountains, the land steps down towards the coast, flattening out to become the Heretaunga Plains. A number of wide rivers run swiftly to meet the blue Pacific Ocean. The twin cities of Napier and Hastings are the main population centres. Schooling options in the Hawkes Bay include high quality primary and secondary schools.

MANAWATU – WHANGANUI

Manawatu-Whanganui is located just north of the Wellington. Palmerston North is the biggest town in the region and is a hub for educational and research institutions including Massey University. Another large town is Whanganui, which is situated on the banks of the Whanganui River near the coast. Other towns include: Otaki, Foxton, Levin, Taihape, and Woodville.

The region is a large rural plain used for sheep and dairy farming. It has a coastline with beaches to the west and the Tararua and Ruahine mountain ranges to the east. These mountains offer a number of extensive cross-country walks that cover low altitude rainforest up to sub-alpine tussock country with seasonal snow.

The Manawatu is a busy student centre with numerous schooling options for international students. Massey University has established close links with the community and provides pathway options for further study.

WEST COAST

The West Coast is a narrow strip of land between the South Island's Southern Alps and the Tasman Sea. It is the longest region in New Zealand.

With a population of only 31,000 people, the West Coast retains the feeling of a pioneer frontier. It's a wild place known for rivers and rainforests, glaciers and geological treasures. Legends and stories from the past cling to every feature of the landscape.

Westland offers a unique personal schooling option for international students who appreciate the outdoors and wish to explore everything the coast has to offer.

Main City: Greymouth

CANTERBURY

The Canterbury region includes a large central portion of the East Coast of the South Island, centred around the city of Christchurch.

The highest point of the region is the highest point of New Zealand. The spectacular Aoraki/Mount Cook stands at 3,754 metres (Aoraki is Maori for Cloud Piercer). At the other end of the scale, the submarine trenches off the coast of Kaikoura are thousands of metres deep, providing an ideal environment for the whales, dolphins and seals that live there permanently.

Christchurch is a thriving city with excellent primary and secondary schooling options for international students.

OTAGO

Located in the centre of the South Island, Central Otago comprises a series of river basins and deep river gorges.

Central Otago is the only region in New Zealand to experience a near continental climate, having the hottest summers and coldest winters in New Zealand. Old trails that provided access for thousands of miners in the gold rush of the 1860s can still be seen winding over the hills, along with stone cottages, cleverly engineered water channels, mines and machinery associated with the gold rush.

Education options for school age international students in and around Dunedin are excellent.

SOUTHLAND

Southland is New Zealand's southernmost region and includes New Zealand's third island, Stewart Island.

The lush, green pastoral lands of Southland are a strong contrast to the dryness of Central Otago further north. Throughout the Southland region are a number of accessible, tranquil waterways that attract fly-fishing enthusiasts in search of brown trout.

Southland's largest urban centre is Invercargill, a city of 49,000 people. Visitors come to admire the elegant Victorian and Edwardian buildings, gardens and landscaped parks. As in Dunedin to the north, Invercargill was originally settled by people from Scotland.

Invercargill is built around beautiful Queens Park—80 hectares of gardens, wildlife and sporting fun. As well as an 18-hole golf course, the park has animal enclosures, a bird aviary, play areas and the Southland Museum.

Main City: Invercargill
